Market Commentary for the Month

Equity markets in September ultimately rose with investors reaction to economic news, both positive and negative, causing some volatility during the month. Global markets fell around 3% in the first few days of September, rose almost 7%, fell almost 2% and rebounded towards the end of the month to finish the month up (MSCI World local up 3.5%; MSCI EM local up 6.1%)

Investors are seeking confirmation that the global economy, particularly the US, is improving. The data implies improvement but is mixed and concerns remain over consumer and government indebtedness, unemployment and stretched bank balance sheets. At the end of September US consumer confidence data, particularly the job component, was disappointing while housing data (a lagging indicator, only July numbers) was improving or positive. Even though the rate of decline of the housing data is improving, in absolute terms it remains negative, i.e. housing is down 13% yoy in the US.

On the whole RARE is still of the view the economy is improving, but we continue to watch for a number of signposts to support our view including an improvement in US employment numbers.

We continue to observe banks being very cautious about lending while they repair their balance sheets, consequently corporates are increasingly turning to financial markets for their funding needs.

Many investors have not participated in the rising equity market, with Morningstar data showing that for the first eight months of 2009 bond funds attracted net deposits of USD209b, while equity funds attracted only USD15b. This reflects continued nervousness on the part of investors. We expect this position to reverse as markets get confidence in the economic recovery and begin to worry about inflation.

Global activity on the merger and acquisition front has begun to pick up – 25 deals worth more than USD2b each have been announced in the last two months. Within the infrastructure universe Exelon cancelled its USD14b acquisition of NRG, Macquarie Airports has been trading minority stakes in existing airports and the shareholders approved AUD345m buyback of the management contract together with internalizing the management.

Portfolio Commentary

RARE underperformed against its benchmark and Global Equities in September (0.8% vs 1% and 2.1% respectively).

On a regional basis, we added slightly to Asia Pacific Developing, and reduced UK/Europe holdings.

In Europe, we reduced Electric holdings and added Gas exposure. We also added new Asia Pacific and Asia Pacific Developing Airport holdings.

On a stock specific level, strong performance continued for developing ports (DP World), whilst SES (satellites) and SPN (electric and gas transmission/distribution) also outperformed. Shenzhen International (toll roads) was an underperformer for the month.

We continue to invest in companies with high conviction earnings and sound balance sheets. Markets have continued to run aggressively, and we have been switching out of fully valued companies into those where we still see substantial relative upside.
